Senator's wife ordered to stay away from husband

Plane incident fallout. Manitoba senator Rod Zimmer, 69, and wife Maygan Sensenberger, 23, were in court on Monday morning

A senator's 23-year-old wife charged with causing a disturbance and endangering an aircraft received a bittersweet anniversary gift from a Saskatoon judge.

Maygan Sensenberger was released from jail Monday, but told not to have contact with her husband, Rod Zimmer, a senator from Winnipeg. She is also prohibited from drinking alcohol and entering bars.

The provincial court judge who issued the ruling didn't explain why Sensenberger is to stay away from her husband, who was also in court.

The couple, who married one year ago, made headlines last Thursday when Saskatoon police were called to meet a plane carrying a disruptive passenger.

The two were flying to Saskatoon from Ottawa when Zimmer experienced tightness in his chest. Sensenberger reacted by becoming upset.

Court records show police believe she uttered threats against her husband and threatened to take down the plane.

Fellow passenger Scott Wright, a former ambulance attendant, said he witnessed the couple arguing, but denied that any threats were made. Wright testified that Sensenberger seemed concerned about her husband's medical condition.

He added that the 69-year-old Zimmer seemed to feel better after being given oxygen, but that Sensenberger remained upset.

Upon hearing the judge's order, Sensenberger told the judge, "I don't know what to do."

The judge said the process will unfold "one step at a time."

No one was injured in last week's incident.

Sensenberger is set to appear in domestic violence court — which sometimes gives people a chance to enter a plea and receive treatment in exchange for a lesser sentence — on Tuesday at 9 a.m.

Operating budget

Police to see outside review

The Winnipeg Police Service is getting an outside operational review.

The goal of the review is to look at Winnipeg's largest and fastest-growing operating budget, and "find innovative ways to stretch limited tax dollars while making the most efficient use of police resources," city staff said in a press release.

The city said the operational review will look at all parts of the service's operations — how it's organized, its systems, technology, administration and staffing — with a focus on finding efficiencies and savings.

This contract for the review will be awarded in October, with a first report on findings in due in November. METRO

Stabbing

Arrests made in robbery, assault

Winnipeg police have two suspects in custody after a man was stabbed during a robbery at an Osborne area apartment last week.

Officers were called to a suite in the 100 block of Roslyn Road Friday evening after two men known to the 22-year-old male tenant showed up unannounced and tried to steal the victim's personal items.

The tenant was stabbed and taken to hospital in unstable condition. He was later upgraded to stable.

Leonard Dalton Gavelin, 18, and Jarrett Albert Ellison, 18, both of Winnipeg, were arrested Sunday.

Both accused are charged with robbery with a weapon and failure to comply with a sentence. METRO

Cyclists left scrambling by sudden closure of parkade

Bike rack. Drivers not the only ones surprised by Civic Parkade shutdown

SHANE GIBSON

It's not just four-wheeled commuters left without a parking spot in downtown Winnipeg with the emergency closure of the Civic Parkade.

Cyclists who normally lock their two-wheeled transportation to a well-used bike rack on the lot's first floor were also left scrambling to find new spots Monday morning.

"It was all fenced off and there was no notice," said avid cyclist and Red River College Business Administration instructor Bonnie Van Steelandt, who has parked her bike in the lot across from the school for the last three years. "Today's the first day of classes... it's used by both students and faculty."

The Winnipeg Parking Authority (WPA), which operates the city-owned lot at 171 Princess St., moved to immediately close the parkade last Friday after a quarterly engineering report brought up structural concerns.

"The building was built in 1966, so probably it's safe to say it's reached it useful life expectancy," said WPA COO Randy Topolniski Monday.

Temporary parking was found for the hundreds of drivers left without spots at the city owned Millennium Library Parkade Monday, and Topolniski said temporary bike racks would be installed outside the shuttered parkade shortly.

Topolniski said it's too soon to say if or when the parkade would open again.

- Bonnie Van Steelandt is one of as many 30 cyclists who used the bike rack because it was sheltered from bad weather, and offered security from thieves.
- "This is probably not the best area in the city," she said, noting the rack was within sight of the attendant working in the lot. "There's additional comfort of having someone in close proximity to your bike."

Zoo. Siberian tiger cub dies

One of the tiger cubs born at the Assiniboine Park Zoo last year has died.

Staff at the zoo announced Reka, one of the Siberian tigers born last July, died Monday morning.

"As you can imagine, staff at the zoo are devastated," said Tim Sinclair-Smith, spokesperson for the Assiniboine Park Zoo. "Reka was such a celebrated addition to the zoo and was one of the crowd favourites ... he will be missed and we're doing everything possible to ensure the health of our other animals and to provide support for our staff."

Sinclair-Smith said staff noted that Reka appeared tired, wasn't eating and had a discharge around his eyes. He was to be examined Monday morning, but after being tranquilized his heart stopped beating and he died just before 10 a.m.

Lori Douglas inquiry. Independent counsel quits

The independent lawyer leading the inquiry into a Manitoba judge and her naked photos has quit his post.

Guy Pratte's resignation comes after he filed a motion last week with the Federal Court arguing that the Canadian Judicial Council panel hearing the inquiry had overstepped its bounds by becoming involved in a hearing while also presiding over it.

Pratte did not immediately return calls seeking comment and the executive director of the council would not say why Pratte stepped down.

"I am not going to comment on why he left. We are aware of course of the judicial review application and it is something that the council may have to address at some point," Norman Sabourin said Monday.

"We have accepted that resignation and we have to move forward to make sure it doesn't create a delay."

A council committee is looking into the conduct of Justice Lori Douglas, whose husband uploaded sexually explicit photos of her to the Internet in 2003, when the couple were family law lawyers at a Winnipeg firm. Douglas eventually went on to be named associate chief justice of the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench, heading up the family court division. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fire spreads 3 days after massive refinery blast

Venezuela. Residents in nearby neighbourhood still troubled by lack of warning

An intense fire at a Venezuelan refinery spread to a third fuel tank on Monday nearly three days after an explosion killed at least 41 people and injured more than 150.

Oil Minister Rafael Ramirez said a third tank ignited at the Amuay refinery, which has been in flames since Saturday's blast.

Government officials had previously said they had the blaze contained, and the spread to another tank was an apparent setback to their plans to quickly restart the refinery.

Officials have said a gas leak led to the blast, but investigators have yet to determine the precise causes. Prosecutor General Luisa Ortega said at a news conference that 151 people were injured, 33 of whom remain in hospitals.

A nine-year-old girl was missing in the area, Health Minister Eugenia Sader said on television.

Criticisms of the government's response to the gas leak emerged from local residents as well as oil experts.

People in neighbourhoods next to the refinery said they had no official warning before the explosion hit at about 1 a.m. on Saturday.

"What bothers us is that there was no sign of an alarm," said Luis Suarez, a bank employee in the neighbourhood. "Many of us woke up thinking it was an earthquake."

Qur'an burning. No criminal charges for U.S. soldiers

Six U.S. army soldiers and three Marines escaped criminal charges but received administrative punishments for mistakenly burning Qur'ans and urinating on the corpses of Taliban insurgents in Afghanistan, U.S. military officials said Monday.

The two incidents, revealed earlier this year, hurt relations with Afghans. U.S. military leaders widely condemned the incidents.

The Qur'an burning triggered riots and retribution killings, including two U.S. troops who were shot by an Afghan soldier and two U.S. military advisers who were gunned down at their desks at the Interior Ministry.

The soldiers were disciplined for the burning of Qur'ans earlier this year at a U.S. base in Afghanistan, and the Marines were punished for their participation in a video that showed them urinating on Taliban corpses.

Discipline against a navy sailor in the Qur'an burnings was dismissed.

Belgium braces for release of killer's accomplice

Even after all these years, the mere mention of the name "Marc Dutroux" can wipe the smile off the face of almost any Belgian.

And now that the convicted pedophile and killer's ex-wife — an accomplice who let two of his victims starve to death — is on the verge of release, Belgium is being forced to relive some of its darkest moments.

On Tuesday, the nation's highest court will likely approve granting Michelle Martin conditional freedom, even though she served little more than half of the 30-year sentence she was given for her part in the mid-1990s kidnappings, rapes and killings. One of Belgium's most loathed criminals could walk free within hours or days afterward.

For many in this country, memories that had been largely buried are now resurfacing.

"We are scared for our children, obviously, for the other children as well," said Celine Doignies, a bar owner in the village of Malonne, where Martin is expected to move into a convent as part of the conditions of her release.

Martin depicted herself as a more passive culprit than Dutroux, acting on the whims of a psychopath. But she is still blamed for aiding her then-husband's depraved and murderous spree, and is particularly loathed for letting two eight-year-old girls starve to death while Dutroux was briefly imprisoned.

The Court of Cassation will decide on appeals from the prosecutor's office and the families of victims on Tuesday and rule if procedural errors were made in the decision of a lower court to approve Martin's conditional release.

Ex-boyfriend charged with murder

Toronto body-parts case. Guang Hua Liu had a four-year relationship with accused, police say

An ex-boyfriend of a woman whose body parts were found scattered in two Toronto-area parks has been charged in her death.

Peel Regional Police Insp. George Koekkoek told a news conference the 40-year-old man is charged with second-degree murder in what he described as a "domestic-related homicide."

Chun Qi Jiang was arrested in Toronto on Sunday and remanded into custody when he appeared in court on Monday.

Jiang, a Canadian citizen of Chinese descent, was not previously known to police, Koekkoek said.

Grisly discoveries

- On Aug. 15, Liu's right foot was found in the Credit River in Mississauga, Ont. Liu's head and hands were later discovered in the river.
- Two calves, a thigh and an arm were found in West Highland Creek, just blocks from where she lived in Toronto.

The inspector said Jiang had a four-year relationship with Guang Hua Liu, 41, and the couple was recently estranged. He did not know exactly when the relationship ended.

"We're still trying to flesh out those details so I'm not at liberty to go any further on that part," he said.

Student protests. Chaos reigns in return to Quebec classrooms

The calm of summer was shattered Monday with the return of school for Quebec universities, where some classes were disrupted as protesters disobeyed the back-to-school law.

Chaotic scenes, reminiscent of those seen across the province in the spring, suddenly flared up at two Montreal universities after a relatively quiet summer.

The province passed an emergency law, known as Bill 78, to set stiff fines for people who prevent students from attending class.

A tumultuous standoff erupted in the corridors of Université de Montréal between security guards and masked protesters. The demonstrators were trying to spring seven of their comrades who had been detained by officials in a fourth-floor classroom.

Melting away. Summer heat shrinks Arctic Ocean ice to record low

Critical ice in the Arctic Ocean melted to record low levels this sweltering summer and that can make weather more extreme far away from the poles, scientists say.

The National Snow and Ice Data Center reported Monday that the extent of Arctic sea ice shrank to 4.09 million square kilometres and is likely to melt more in the coming weeks. That breaks the old record of 4.17 million square kilometres set in 2007.

The North Pole region is an ocean that mostly is crusted at the top with ice. In the winter, the frozen saltwater surface usually extends about 15.54 million square kilometres, shrinking in summer and growing back in the fall. That's different from Antarctica, which is land covered by ice and snow and then surrounded by sea ice.

Quoted

"It really does imply that the Arctic is moving to a new state. The Arctic is changing."

Tom Wagner, NASA ice systems program scientist

Normally sea ice in the Arctic reaches its minimum in mid-September and then starts refreezing. But levels on Sunday shrank 69,930 square kilometres beyond the old record.

Figures are based on satellite records dating back to 1979. The ice centre bases its figures on averages calculated over five days.

Terror plot. Prosecutors claim U.S. soldiers formed militia inside army

Four Army soldiers killed a former comrade and his girlfriend to protect an anarchist militia group they formed that stockpiled assault weapons and plotted a range of anti-government attacks, prosecutors told a judge Monday.

Prosecutors in rural Long County, near the sprawling Army post Fort Stewart, said the militia group, composed of active duty and former U.S. military members, spent at least $87,000 buying guns and bomb components. They also said the militia was serious enough to kill two people — former soldier Michael Roark and his 17-year-old girlfriend, Tiffany York — by shooting them in the woods last December in order to keep the group's plans secret.

"This domestic terrorist organization did not simply plan and talk," prosecutor Isabel Pauley told a Superior Court judge. "Prior to the murders in this case, the group took action. Evidence shows the group possessed the knowledge, means and motive to carry out their plans."

One of the Fort Stewart soldiers charged in the case, Army Pfc. Michael Burnett, also gave testimony that backed up many of the assertions made by prosecutors. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fessing up

- Burnett, 26, pleaded guilty Monday to manslaughter, illegal gang activity and other charges. He made a deal to co-operate with prosecutors in their case against the three other soldiers.

Housing affordability still eroding

Higher home prices. Possible interest-rate increases next year could strain ownership and ultimately cool housing markets

Housing affordability continued to erode in most markets across Canada in the second quarter as a result of higher home prices and interests rates, but there were a few bright spots.

Alberta, in particular, solidified its position as having the most affordable housing market thanks to a significant drop in prices for electricity and natural gas, says a quarterly Royal Bank housing report.

Montreal also enjoyed improved affordability, which prompted resales to rise 8.6 per cent to reach their third-highest second-quarter total, the report said.

Western indexes

- A 17-per-cent reduction in Alberta utility costs was the biggest contributor to the improvement in the cost of owning a home as a share of household income.
- Strong activity worsened housing affordability in Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

On a national level, modest increases in home prices and mortgage rates slightly eroded housing affordability in the quarter.

RBC's affordability index for a detached bungalow stood at 43.4 per cent of income nationally in the second quarter, up 0.2 percentage points from the first quarter but unchanged from a year ago.

PARK LIFE: FINDING JOY IN THE CITY'S COMMUNAL BACKYARD

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca/voices/she-says

Sometimes I'm jealous of my suburban pals. I don't have a backyard, a barbecue, a deck or a pool; but I do have a park. In the city's concrete jungle, parks are an oasis of green where visitors and residents congregate en masse to enjoy the dog days of Canada's fleeting summer.

Every weekend, downtown dwellers descend from their high-rise abodes to enjoy the street-level wonders of urban parklands. They sprawl out on picnic blankets and people-watch as other park life fans throw Frisbees, walk their dogs and engage in raucous rounds of croquet and bocce ball. After the sun goes down, people bring their own lanterns and sparklers, hosting al fresco birthday parties under the moonlight.

Land of the park-goers

When so much of our urban landscape is claimed by retailers and condo developers, these impromptu gatherings are a way for us to take back public space as something that is truly ours.

This summer, my neighbourhood has been playing host to a series of impromptu outdoor movie nights. These screenings aren't so much an official community event as they are a couple of guys with a projector and enough Facebook friends to get the word out.

Tea light candles demarcate the seating area and the previews are YouTube music videos that inspire dancing from the crowd. Bicycles litter the makeshift aisles and the organizers sell $3 cans of Pabst Blue Ribbon and PWYC popcorn. Is it legal? Definitely not, but it's amazing.

After the movie finishes, everyone gathers their garbage and quietly makes their way home. For the most part, no one is loud and obnoxious; we respect our neighbours and the sanctity of our little patch of green in the heart of the city.

When so much of our urban landscape is claimed by retailers and condo developers, these impromptu gatherings are a way for us to take back public space as something that is truly ours.

Parks are exempt from the rules and commercial interests that govern the rest of the city; they are places to bring home-made meals and make DIY fun. There is no waiting for a table at the park and the price of admission is nil.

My park is where I liberate myself from the monotony of the treadmill and run along winding pathways and hidden trails. It is where I go to be alone with a book or reconnect with friends over a game of scrabble accompanied by a concealed bottle of wine. It is the bonus piece of beautiful green space that was never advertised with my 800-square-foot apartment.

As cityscapes become increasingly dominated by paved sidewalks and towering structures of concrete and glass, our parks, no matter how small, feel like an expanse of natural realness. They should be enjoyed and celebrated but most importantly, preserved.

- How did you get the shot? The heron was preoccupied with eating the frog so it let me approach fairly close. I got down low in the grass to get a more intimate view and better background. I crawled on my hands and knees to get closer to the bird, knowing that the bird was less likely to fly off if I was crawling. The bipedal form of humans is how most animals recognize humans and consider us a threat.

The number of years a yellow-crowned night heron family will inhabit a single nest. This is remarkable loyalty as the bird only lives for around six years, but its family will stay far beyond that. However, in many of the U.S. breeding grounds, the nests are under threat from hunters.

Battleship

Director. Peter Berg

Stars. Alexander Skarsgård, Brooklyn Decker, Liam Neeson

The reliable Liam Neeson elevates every film he puts his name to, including pay cheque gigs like Clash of the Titans. But even he couldn't keep Battleship from tanking. Based in name only on the old Hasbro board game, the Peter Berg-directed film awkwardly yokes a romantic redemption tale with a sci-fi potboiler about space aliens invading Earth. Neeson gives good stare in Battleship, as the admiral in charge of the U.S. Navy Pacific Fleet. That's about all he gives, but you can't blame him. The characters are little more than game pieces in this exercise in CGI overkill. Taylor Kitsch is the putative star, playing screw-up Alex Hopper, who fails at the high ideals set by his Navy-straight older brother Stone (Alexander Skarsgård). Battleship gives little reason to care about these characters. The state of your hearing after all the boom-boom would be of greater concern.

Headhunters

Director. Morten Tyldum

Stars. Aksel Hennie, Synnove Macody Lund, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau

Headhunters begins as a caper flick — we even get an opening how-to in the art of art theft — before transforming into a chase thriller, with both sections of director Morten Tyldum's film equally engrossing. Aksel Hennie is Roger Brown, a corporate talent scout who takes his occupation so seriously, he may as well be collecting scalps. Despite his impeccably tailored suits and outwardly genteel manners, Roger has a furtive look, resembling a Scandinavian Steve Buscemi. Roger is really a boor and conman. The craftiest trick of this well-written Norwegian film, though, is the way it shifts our sympathies from despising Roger at the outset to somewhere close to cheering for him at the end.

TV's fresh fall crop a rather safe fare

Predictable choices. With the exception of Animal Practice, new programs seem to be sticking to tried-and-true formulas

Here's a fearless prediction for the new fall season: Animal Practice will be either a hit or a big-time miss; either a comedy game-changer for NBC or a punch line for its ratings desperation.

This sitcom about a veterinarian and his monkey sidekick is already commanding the attention of viewers. NBC has heavily hyped it, most notably by interrupting the Olympics closing ceremony to air a preview of the show and enraging viewers waiting for the Who.

But who cares if they're angry? For any new show, just getting noticed is half the battle. Between now and December, Animal Practice (airing on Global in Canada) is among nearly two dozen series getting launched by the five broadcast networks, which for weeks have been feverishly hyping the new crop with everything from bus ads to Twitter feeds, plus multi-platform previews of some shows, like Animal Practice, thrown in.

All of this is done with the certain knowledge that at least two-thirds of the new fare, no matter how relentlessly promoted, will have fallen by the wayside by this time next year.

Remember these duds from last fall: Charlie's Angels? Free Agents? How to be a Gentleman? Does a similar fate await Animal Practice, which stars Justin Kirk as a misanthropic veterinarian and Crystal, a scene-stealing capuchin monkey, as his oddly human second banana?

Or what about Go On, an NBC comedy (airing on Global in Canada) that casts Matthew Perry as a sports-talk radio host forced to attend grief counselling after the death of his wife? Can sadness trigger hilarity?

Or what about Chicago Fire (airing on Global in Canada) an action drama about firefighters from Law & Order maestro Dick Wolf? Chicago Fire could be pigeonholed as a show about public safety, but bona fide cop dramas — one of TV's most enduring genres — are represented by three fanciful variations.

On Vegas, CBS' robust new drama (airing on Global in Canada) set in the early 1960s, Dennis Quaid plays a rancher-turned-sheriff of the budding gambling mecca, with Michael Chiklis a mobster casino boss.

NBC's Elementary (airing on Global in Canada) stars Jonny Lee Miller as a modern-day detective with the name and quirkiness of legendary Sherlock Holmes, and Lucy Liu as Dr. Joan Watson. They assist the New York Police Department with solving crimes.

And the CW's Beauty and the Beast (airing on Showcase in Canada) features a lovely young homicide detective (Kristin Kreuk) who reconnects with a handsome young doctor who saved her life when a teenager. She also discovers his terrible secret: Thanks to a military experiment gone awry, when he is enraged, he becomes a terrifying beast with uncontrollable strength.

Meanwhile, there's just one new lawyer show on tap: CBS' Made in Jersey (airing on Global in Canada), which stars British actress Janet Montgomery as a young working-class Jerseyite from a long line of self-taught beauticians, a gal who bought her attache case not on Madison Avenue but down the shore. She lands a job across the river at a prestigious Manhattan law firm where her style raises eyebrows but wins cases.

Autumn will bring three new doctor dramas, each of which — like Made in Jersey — is headlined by a woman.

Jordana Spiro stars in Fox's The Mob Doctor (airing on CTV in Canada) as a Chicago surgeon whose obligations to the mafia require her to give medical treatment to a gang of hoods.

On the CW's Emily Owens M.D. (airing on CTV in Canada), Mamie Gummer plays a young med-school grad who's beginning a hospital internship full of hope. And on the Fox comedy The Mindy Project, creator-star Mindy Kaling plays a thriving OBGYN whose personal life is a succession of pratfalls.

NBC's edgy The New Normal (airing on CTV in Canada) finds gay couple Andrew Rannells and Justin Bartha concluding there's only one thing missing from their happy home: a child. They line up a surrogate mom (Georgia King) to carry it for them.

Also trading on the gay theme is Partners (airing on Citytv in Canada), with David Krumholtz as Joe and Michael Urie as Louis, partnered architects and best friends since high school. Louis is gay and Joe is straight, which isn't a problem until Joe decides to marry his girlfriend and Louis feels the sharp pangs of jealousy.

Besides the hybrid Beauty and the Beast, the networks have scheduled five other series with a supernatural, sci-fi or fantasy twist.

At the start of NBC's epic new drama Revolution (airing on Citytv in Canada) the lights abruptly go out, around the world. This unexplained power outage deprives everyone of every piece of electrical technology, stranding humanity in a modern-day Dark Age with no end in sight.

Let's hope this fate doesn't really befall humanity as we look forward to 2012's fall TV season.

Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt

Pitt children let loose in French toy store

Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie squeezed in a little late-summer vacation time, taking four of their six kids to the coastal town of Le Touquet, France, over the weekend, according to People magazine.

Pitt and Jolie treated daughters Zahara, Shiloh and Vivienne along with son Knox to pizza before letting them loose on a local toy store Jolie had visited before.

"I wasn't notified of their visit. I didn't expect it. I didn't even recognize them. I said 'Bonjour' like I do to all my clients and then I saw Brad Pitt," an employee of Culture Kid tells the magazine. "Since Angelina was here with her son last year, the shop has moved, but they found us."

Twilight actor misses the pre-fame days

Despite the mega-success of the Twilight film franchise, Kellan Lutz kind of misses the good old days.

"My favourite moments were during the first movie, before any of this craze happened. We were just ourselves, no one really knew who we were yet," Lutz tells Us Weekly. "We haven't changed per se, but we were able to get away with a lot more." And while some members of the cast have dealt with the spotlight better than others, Lutz insists the series' popularity caught them all off guard.

"I don't really like to comment on everyone else's process, but I think we've all done the best we could with this," he says. "It can be surreal sometimes. I don't know if we all knew what we were fully getting into on all fronts."

Tom Cruise kept the diamonds coming

THE WORD

Say what you will about Tom Cruise — we certainly do — but the guy isn't cheap.

During their five-year marriage, Tom Cruise showered Katie Holmes with the type of gifts found only under the Scientology Christmas tree.

"Tom was extremely generous to Katie with lavish gifts during their marriage, and she will be keeping millions of dollars of jewelry, Hermes handbags and other luxurious items," a source tells RadarOnline.

"Tom gave Katie diamond earrings as a birthday gift one year that easily cost over $500,000, and he had custom design pieces made for her."

Under the terms of their divorce, Holmes gets to keep the swag and is free to sell it if her earlobes get tired — meaning, we can only hope, that she won't need that Dawson's Creek reunion paycheck.

Happy couple, Reynolds, Lively going strong

After almost a year together, Ryan Reynolds and Blake Lively are still going strong, according to People magazine. The happy couple was spotted in New York City last week celebrating Lively's 25th birthday with an indulgent treat at Serendipity 3. "They were very attentive to each other, sitting close and very into each other," an eyewitness says. "They were oblivious to what was going on around them,"

John Mayer makes some life changes

Looks like John Mayer really was in the mood for some major change.

After reportedly breaking up with Katy Perry following a few weeks of dating, the singer unveiled a new, shorter haircut, ditching the curly locks he'd been sporting for a while, according to Us Weekly.

And while Mayer seems to be moving on, Perry is reportedly not taking the split very well. "She's really upset about it," a source says. "She is making it seem like it wasn't serious with John, but she is hurt."

Obey the stop sign for snacking

Health options. New study shows that visual cues can effectively cut down on consumption of snack and junk foods in your home

life@metronews.ca

Snacks are seductive. So delicious. So satisfying.

Not always healthy, though — and overindulgence is a constant danger.

But new research from Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., suggests that visual cues can effectively cut consumption, without really damaging enjoyment.

Cornell's food and brand lab dyed every seventh chip in a stack of potato chips red, then gave them to unsuspecting test subjects.

"We simply had marker chips in there," says lab director Brian Wansink, author of Mindless Eating: Why We Eat More Than We Think.

"We didn't say anything. There was no mention of why it was red, or anything. Simply having a marker chip in there led people to eat either seven or 14 chips. They got to the point where they'd see this stop sign. They might eat one or two more chips, but they wouldn't eat 50 more."

By the numbers

$2.1B

$2.13 billion is the value of snack food products shipped by Canadian producers in 2009.

A happy accident, or real science?

"We did the study three times, because the first time, it seemed too good to be true," he says. "Every time we did it, we saw this huge, huge effect."

But does it work when people know what the red chip means? Can this work with other snack foods, which don't so easily stack?

"Yes, yes, yes!" Wansink enthuses. "You can break your snacks up into little baggies. It may not be good for the environment, but it gives you a visual stop sign. Or you can use a twist seal to reseal a candy bar after you've eaten part of it."

He also suggests eating ice cream out of a little bowl.

"You can go back for seconds. You can go back for thirds! The empty bowl is kind of a red chip, saying 'Hey, do you want more?' You can have more, but you have to make that decision."

Wansink insists that eating less doesn't mean there's a matching drop in snack satisfaction.

"What we find is that it doesn't seem to be the amount. It's just whether you get the snack or not. We find that people get tremendous satisfaction out of just half the amount they would otherwise eat.

"Visual stop signs cause you to think twice."

In much of Canada, the peak for fall allergies is the third week of September, thanks to weed pollens (mostly ragweed) and mould spores. In the September issue of Best Health magazine, health writer Michelle Villett rounds up treatments for allergy-related sniffles and sneezes. Speak to your doctor to be sure you're choosing the right remedy. Meantime, here are some highlights from our longer article. (Remember to always follow package directions closely.)

Oral antihistamines (Allegra-D, Benadryl Allergy Liqui-Gels)
They block chemical receptors in our bodies that react to histamines; they don't cure allergies but they do control symptoms such as a runny nose and itching.

Tip
Diphenhydramine, an ingredient found in products including Benadryl, can cause drowsiness. Newer ingredients, one of which is fexofenadine (found in Allegra D), have fewer side-effects.

Nasal decongestants (Claritin Nasal Pump, Dristan Nasal Spray)
When allergens enter the nasal cavities, they cause blood vessels to expand; these decongestants help shrink them. But don't take these for longer than three to five days, because it's possible to become dependent.

Eye drops (Visine Allergy Advance Eye Drops with Antihistamines, Albalon Eye Drops Liquifilm Decongestant).
They combine antihistamine and decongestant, and work the same way as the oral remedies, except they are for the eyes.

Tip
Because our eyes flush drops out, they are best used for temporary symptom relief before your oral remedy starts to work.

Recreational use of MDMA can have long lasting effects. ISTOCK PHOTOS

The agony of ecstasy

Health effects. Study finds that even casual use of MDMA over a short period of time can have lasting issues

CELIA MILNE
life@metronews.ca

Taking MDMA pills at a rave could hurt your brain in the long run.

MDMA — also known as ecstasy, XTC, Adam, E, or the love drug — is illegal.

It is sold inexpensively on the street, and is commonly taken at all-night dance parties.

When you buy ecstasy, you are often getting drugs other than MDMA, including caffeine, ephedrine, amphetamine or LSD, which can make it lethal, according to the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH).

There have been reports of clusters of overdoses and even deaths of young people from MDMA, but its long-term effects have been widely debated. A new study in Germany has found MDMA can indeed have lasting effects on brain function.

Researchers ran tests on 109 people in the study; some had taken no MDMA and some had taken as many as 60 pills in the previous year.

The 23 volunteers who had used more than 10 pills of MDMA did significantly worse on tests of visual memory and learning than those who didn't take this recreational drug.

Researchers made sure that the differences in brain function couldn't be explained by age, intelligence, medical history, nutrition, sleep quality or whether subjects were users of cannabis, alcohol and cigarettes.

"Our findings may raise concerns with regard to MDMA use, even in recreational amounts over a relatively short time period," noted the authors.

The study is being published in the Journal of Addiction Medicine.

Arrogant people

Researchers at UC Berkeley found that overconfidence, the belief that you are more physically talented, socially adept, and skilled at your job than you really are, is influenced by social status. Professor Cameron Anderson, co-author of the study, explains that those who believe they are better than others tend to be given a higher place in the social ladder. But thinking you're the best isn't always a good thing. In fact, the study shows that it can negatively affect both performance and decision-making. So pipe down.

Finally, a healthy version of Shrimp Fried Rice

Fried rice in Asian restaurants is often made with lard or excess oil, adding enormous amounts of calories and fat.

I use a stock-based sauce that only uses a tablespoon of sesame oil. Also, instead of traditional green peas, I use edamame. That brings the calories per serving to 309 and the total fat to 5.4 grams.

1. Sauce: Whisk chicken stock, soy sauce, sesame oil and chili sauce in a small bowl. Set aside.

2. Add rice to stock and bring to a boil. Reduce heat to low, cover and simmer 10 minutes. Remove from heat and let sit for 10 minutes, covered.

3. Lightly coat large skillet or wok with cooking spray, add oil and set over medium-high heat. Add onion and sauté 5 minutes or until softened. Add garlic and ginger and sauté 1 more minute. Add shrimp and edamame and sauté 3 minutes or until the shrimp just turns pink. Stir in the carrots and green onions.

4. Add cooked rice to shrimp mix. Add sauce and stir-fry 2 minutes, or until everything is warmed through and rice is coated with sauce. Serve hot.

ROSE REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVORITES (WHITECAP BOOKS) BY ROSE REISMAN

Ingredients

Sauce
- 1/3 cup chicken stock
- 3 tbsp low-sodium soy sauce
- 1 tbsp sesame oil
- 1 tsp hot chili sauce

Rice
- 1 1/2 cups white rice
- 1 1/2 cups chicken stock
- 2 tsp vegetable oil
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 1/2 tsp each finely chopped garlic and ginger
- 4 oz raw shrimp, peeled, deveined and diced
- 1 cup frozen shelled edamame
- 1/2 cup each grated carrots and chopped green onions

Say "fibre" and everyone thinks "bran," but there is a world beyond wheat that may be even better for you.

One of the key nutrients required for, ahem, regularity is magnesium and magnesium can be bound by wheat bran rendering it inabsorbable.

So over the long haul, you want to vary the source of bulking substance like wheat bran (insoluble fibre) and add cholesterol lowering, blood sugar regulating soluble fibre from other sources. (And I will try to keep this clean...promise.)

Insoluble Fibre Sources

1. Kidney and Lima Beans, Lentils and Dried Peas
Kidney and lima beans as well as lentils and dried peas are fabulous sources of soluble fibre. Find a way to work them into your soup, rice or entrée daily.

2. Psyllium Husk
Psyllium husk is found in some breakfast cereals but also as a powdered supplement that can be added to just about anything.

3. Barley
Barley is a fabulous alternative to rice. Cooked in stock and stirred with grated Parmesan cheese, it is almost risotto-like. Tossed into salads and soups it adds texture and flavour.

What insoluble fibre does is pull water into the bowel to form an easy to pass gel. This prolongs stomach emptying time to slow down digestion of sugars and helps capture and remove bad fats. Easy, peasy...get it?

Thai Barley Salad.
Seasonings spice up this easy summer side dish

1. In saucepan, bring 625 ml (2 1/2 cups) lightly salted water to boil. Meanwhile, rinse barley; add to boiling water. Cover and simmer until tender but still slightly chewy, about 25 minutes. Drain and rinse under cold water. Drain well, then place in bowl.

2. In bowl, whisk lime juice, vinegar, chili garlic sauce, fish sauce, sugar and salt until sugar is dissolved. Whisk in oil.

3. Cut peaches and red pepper into 2-cm (3/4-inch) pieces. Add to barley along with green onions, spinach, bean sprouts and mint. Drizzle with dressing. Toss to combine. THE CANADIAN PRESS/ FOODLAND ONTARIO

Ingredients

- 175 ml (3/4 cup) pearl barley
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) each lime juice and unseasoned rice vinegar
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) hot Asian chili garlic sauce
- 7 ml (1 1/2 tsp) each fish sauce and granulated sugar
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) salt
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) vegetable oil
- 2 locally grown peaches
- 1 sweet red pepper
- 2 green onions, thinly sliced
- 500 ml (2 cups) baby spinach
- 250 ml (1 cup) bean sprouts
- 50 ml (1/4 cup) chopped fresh mint

Flavour gets all rolled up: Pork and Cashew Rice Paper Rolls

For something a bit different, try these Pork and Cashew Rolls, which use rice paper. Rice paper is used for making fresh summer rolls (salad rolls) or fried spring rolls in Vietnamese cuisine. It offers a great contrast texture to the ingredients that are rolled up in it.

1. Slice pork tenderloin in half lengthwise, cut halves into thin strips. Heat oil in large skillet over medium-high heat; cook pork until browned, about 10 minutes.

2. Add 1/2 cup (125 ml) of the garlic rib sauce. Cook for another 5 minutes until sauce glazes the meat, set aside.

3. Place one sheet of rice paper in large bowl of warm water to soften, about 1 minute. Carefully remove paper and lay on work surface. In the bottom third of paper, place small piece of lettuce, top with small pile of noodles (about 2 tbsp/30 ml). Top noodles with fillings, being careful not to overstuff or the paper will tear.

4. Fold the bottom of paper over top of fillings and begin to roll into a cylinder. Fold sides in and continue rolling to enclose. Once all the rolls are finished slice in half; serve with remaining 1/2 cup (125 ml) of the garlic rib sauce for dipping.

Talking about expensive wedding gifts

CHARLES THE BUTLER

For more, visit charlesmacpherson.com

My boyfriend and I have been together for more than 15 years, and he is from a large family, with more than 20 nieces and nephews, most of whom are now in their early-to-late 20s. When these nieces and nephews start to get married, we will have to attend their weddings and buy a gift. Isn't the usual gift amount about $75 to $100/person attending? My boyfriend hasn't worked in years and we live in a small one-bedroom rented apartment, which I pay for. And since my boyfriend doesn't have any money, I will be paying for these gifts. This has already happened over the years. I don't want to be forced to pay for an expensive gift for his family. The suggestion of not attending any of the weddings could be awkward, but that's a lot of weddings to attend and pay for gifts, or to avoid. Can you please advise your suggestion on this situation?
Thank you,
Not Cheap but Poor

Dear Not Cheap but Poor,

I am a very firm believer that you should never put yourself into debt when giving a present, and it is wrong for anyone to expect this of you. I would think that the rest of the family would have the same predicament.

So the first thing that comes to mind is that perhaps the family would consider a "common family gift" that everyone can put what they can afford in a jar and with that money you buy one present (or the total sum of monies collected) on behalf of the entire family, or at least the contributors.

Thus if you can afford $10, $20 or more, that is your contribution, however, everyone only puts in what they can, and everyone signs the card equally. Good luck, and please let us know what happens.

You should never put yourself in debt when giving a gift. ISTOCK

Reality TV. Reformed 'other woman' offers plenty of advice in The Mistress, which premieres Wednesday

MELISSA REBER
For Metro

If you're caught in a love triangle with a married man, Sarah Symonds has some advice for you: "Get out! Don't walk, run! He will never leave his wife for you."

Sarah would know; she calls herself the reformed "other woman" after a string of affairs (including ones with chef Gordon Ramsay and Jeffrey Archer) left her heartbroken and alone.

She wrote the book Having an Affair? A Handbook For The Other Woman, which stirred up major media interest on the controversial subject. Now she has teamed up with Great Pacific Media to produce a reality show called The Mistress, where she will work with women stuck in these dysfunctional relationships to help set them on the right path. The show premieres Wednesday at 8 p.m. ET on Slice.

What was it that attracted you to the lifestyle of 'the other woman'? What made you finally stop?

At the time I started I was in my late 20s, I was mixing in a high octane PR world. I didn't have the filter to say no. Most of the men I dated were unavailable or married, although sometimes I didn't know that at first. In 2006 I had my heart broken beyond words and that's what made me sit down and write my book. Then when the Gordon Ramsay scandal broke, I didn't want to be that girl in the tabloids and have my parents see that. I wanted to be done with it.

Have you ever been confronted by one of the wives (any fights)?

No physical fights, but I've called both the wives of the men I really loved. It was not out of malice, it was out of pain, but the reaction I got when I called the wives… they were so matter of fact, and there I was bawling my eyes out. They just said, 'OK, I'll have a talk with him when he gets home.'

It was unbelievable.

There are some altercations on the show, but it's not about that and it's not about exposing him (the man). It's a raw subject and I'm trying to get them out of this toxic relationship, and when that happens there are going to be confrontations.

What are the top three signs that your partner might be cheating/has a mistress?

1. If he's suddenly mysterious about his cellphone, if he doesn't want you to see his missed calls or text or he goes into the washroom to use his cellphone — wake up! Who does that? He's probably hiding something.

2. If he says he needs alone time or is willing to run around doing any errands he normally wouldn't. Remember that the "other woman" is always asking to see him so to keep her happy he'll have to find excuses to get out of the house.

3. If he suddenly offers to do his own laundry — what man does that? He might be trying to make sure you don't see any stains on his shirt or a fancy restaurant receipt he left in his pocket.

You've got instincts, use them! If you think something is wrong, investigate it. Having said all that, don't be paranoid, but don't be stupid. Be real.

Sarah Symonds

Advice for the wives?

Wives need to wake up! After you get married you have to still be the woman he married. This might be harsh, but if you're not sleeping with your husband someone else is. But I don't place the blame only on the wife or on the husband; there is blame on both sides. Men — go home and talk to your wife. If it's not working out then end it. It's called wedlock not deadlock!

What's the difference between mistresses around the world?

I hear from women everywhere. Just last week I got emails from women in Manila (Philippines), India, Australia… and it's all textbook details; same situation, different location.

Tell me a bit about the show. What should viewers expect?

It's a mix of Intervention meets Sex and the City. It has a redemption edge to it, but it's a wake-up call for mistresses. My work is over five days with them and I want to get them to realize they are worth more and to move on. Each story is so different… different ages, colours, circumstances. This show is myth busting. You typically think of the busty blond being the mistress, but on the show what we see is so far from that stereotype. It'll blow your mind.

It took a Canadian company to believe in me, so bravo to Canada for taking a chance.

People are interested and searching for this info. And who knew there was so much infidelity here (laughs).

We've already done 14 episodes and women keep knocking on my door wanting to be involved in the show!

Remove the fear from the first day

Breezing into the books. Don't assume your child isn't excited to embark on their scholastic life

The first day at school isn't what it used to be. These days, by the time most children start formal education they're relatively comfortable with separation from the home and parent, says Jayne Singer, PhD, the clinical director of the Child and Parent Program at Boston Children's Hospital.

"Children who have had high-quality day care or preschool make a better transition to school both emotionally and socially," she says.

Still, even leaving a private play-based preschool to go to a public school is a big transition, and there's a lot parents can do to ease a child's stress with any environmental change. When it comes to easing anxiety, familiarity breeds comfort.

"Give the child guidance; show them pictures of their new classroom or school. A lot of schools have the good sense to hold open houses or have a welcome visit. Visit the school, visit the playground. Show them the classroom and where they will play. The sense of familiarity will ease anxiety."

"Also," adds Singer, "younger children do well with concrete reminders about the passage of time. Get a calendar and mark off the days until school starts. Turn it into a craft project. Say, make a flower and add a petal for each day."

One thing parents should watch for is transferring their anxiety.

"Parents shouldn't assume a child is anxious or feels separation. Don't ask, 'Are you scared?' Let the child bring it up and if they do, say, 'Of course you are. I feel nervous when I do something new.'"

Parents should also get ready in advance

"Have a conversation with personnel at the school so you are prepared for the environment," says Singer.

"The more parents know about the school, the more authentic they are in offering guidance to the child. Tell your child they will have a chance to play, they will have a place to draw and paint. Give them concrete examples of what is there. Give them a vision of the classroom as a kind and supportive place."

Ready, set, head for the border!

There are plenty of good reasons to cross the border for your shopping needs. ISTOCK IMAGES

Alison's Money Rule. Keep travel and accommodation costs low to save big on cross-border shopping

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

Desperately seeking last minute back to school deals? Go south.

Call me unpatriotic and a Canadian business killer, but financially stressed families can't be faulted for wanting to save money by taking advantage of cheaper prices.

New customs rules and a strong loonie provide good reasons to head into the US for all those must have school clothes, electronics and other goodies.

But if you go be prepared for long waits during peak times this weekend as the 50 million visits annually by Canadians to the U.S. is the highest in two decades.

Higher limits on what we can bring back to Canada went into effect in June, which will only boost that visitor number.

For stays of 24 hours the import limit is $200, up from $50, and a flat $800 if you stay more than 48 hours, up from $400 for two day visits and $750 for a week or more.

According to the most recent BMO Capital Markets cross border shopping report, some of the best deals south of 49 are the kinds of things kids need\want for school.

For example, running shoes are 37 per cent cheaper in the States, those adorable Pottery Barn Kids backpacks cost 26 per cent less and you'll save 19 per cent on kids' Gap T-shirts.

A basket of U.S. goods including diapers, BBQs, iPods, golf balls and small appliances produces a savings of 14 per cent.

However, don't just focus on prices.

Factor in the cost of gas, meals, hotel as well as duty and GST and HST if you go over limit — which is very easy to do.

Group trips — mini-van anyone? — will certainly save on gas and using loyalty points for hotels is another good strategy.

Don't forget to take the exchange rate into account. Though the posted rate may show the loonie at par or better, when you buy greenbacks it will cost you three to four cents more.

And if you use your credit or debit card there will be an exchange rate differential plus (usually) a 2.5 percent transaction fee.

Affordable travel

When loyalty doesn't pay off

FUN AND FRUGAL
Leslie Scorgie
money@metronews.ca

I had my frugal butt kicked last week as I planned an affordable last minute trip to Europe. In light of the Eurozone debt crises, some of the most inexpensive international holidays at the moment are European vacations.

I had the right idea on how to save money – wait until after the Olympics, be semi-flexible on the location, try to snag a last minute travel special and use loyalty points for flights, rail and hotels.

But, when it came time to redeem my travel rewards, I couldn't use a single point towards any part of the trip.

My first error was waiting too long to book; my second error was trying to book a seat sale on flights through my VISA points — which I have done on previous occasions.

But because I didn't leave enough time in advance, according to VISA's policy, the cheap flights were not available nor eligible for point redemption.

A July 2012 American Express survey revealed that approximately 19 per cent of North Americans use loyalty points for travel throughout the summer months; hence the limited availability.

The next eye-opener for me was learning the true cost of trying to use loyalty rewards semi-last-minute; the amount of points it takes to purchase a ticket can be triple the normal amount. No thanks! That's a bad deal!

That's when I decided to book my seat sale without using points and instead I paid with cash.

Thankfully, with a strong Canadian dollar, off-season pricing and switching to a local airline from London, the price tag was 50 per cent less than if I were to have planned travelling mid-summer.

Post purchase, I learned through Google research that the greatest value travel point collectors receive is when they use their points for business or first class tickets.

Last-minute

The next eye-opener for me was learning the true cost of trying to use loyalty rewards semi-last-minute; the amount of points it takes to purchase a ticket can be triple the normal amount. No thanks!

Thus, I tried one last time to use my points for an upgrade to business class for the long-haul portion of the trip.

NO-GO.

Because I'd booked seats on sale my 'cheap seats' weren't eligible for upgrades … on any segment of the trip.

I still believe in collecting points because I love free things.

But, my unpleasant experience has taught me that to maximize the greatest value from a loyalty program, book well in advance.

I'd also recommend avoiding rewards programs you don't plan to redeem within a short time frame (five years or less).

This is because the longer you wait, the more likely it is the point system will change and adjust to the increasing cost of providing the rewards.

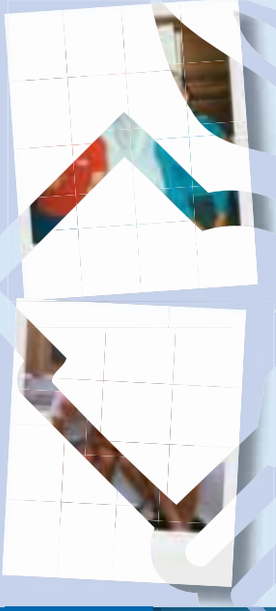
Organ and tissue donation saves lives.



As a guitarist, my eldest brother Graeme inspired me to learn to play; as a weightlifter, he used to show off by bench-pressing me above his head; and later, when I was bullied in school, he would pick me up in his boat of a car, looking intimidating in black clothes, covered in tattoos.

In his early 30s, he was diagnosed with kidney disease—he never showed it, he never looked or seemed sick... I was shocked when I found out that he would need a transplant.

My hope came in the form of my brother's friend since high school, Todd, who offered his own kidney to save my brother's life...

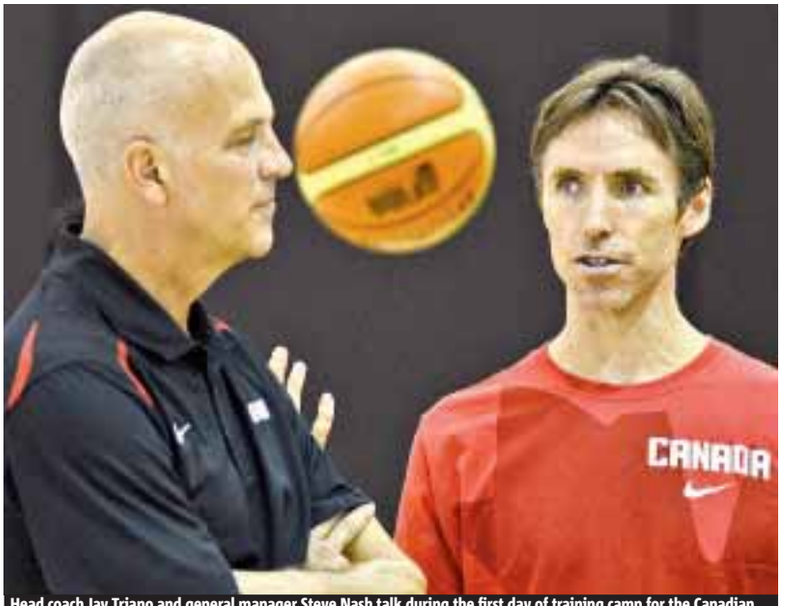
Triano looking for big Canadian commitment

Basketball. Eyeing Olympic berth in Rio, national team coach expects four-year pact from his players



Head coach Jay Triano and general manager Steve Nash talk during the first day of training camp for the Canadian men's national basketball team in Toronto on Friday. TARA WALTON/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE FILE

Jay Triano has witnessed first-hand how the United States men's basketball team changed from underachievers to back-to-back Olympic champions.

He believes the same approach will lead Canada to its first Olympic berth since 2000, and he expects his players to buy in for the long haul.

Just two weeks after the London Olympics closed, Triano and his coaching staff were putting a promising roster of players through shooting drills Monday at the end of a five-day training camp designed to prepare Canada for the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Games.

Triano, just days into his second stint as national team head coach, expects players at the camp to commit to the national team for four years, saying the long-term pledge is essential to getting Canada back on basketball's world stage. Triano was an assistant coach on the U.S. national team when it went from an underachieving group that settled for an Olympic bronze medal in 2004 to a cohesive powerhouse.

"I think gone are the days when you can throw 12 players out there and expect to compete, and I think my time with the United States team showed that," Triano said. "Jerry Colangelo asked those players for a three-year commitment. When they did that and the players became committed, that's when they became successful and won back-to-back gold medals."

Canada hasn't always been able to field its best possible team in Olympic competition. Star guard Steve Nash, now the team's general manager, stopped playing for Canada after it failed to qualify for the 2004 Olympics and focused on his NBA career. Centre Jamaal Magloire, who has been working with the big men at the camp, opted not to play during the height of his career. Centre Samuel Dalembert was dismissed from the team after a rift with former coach Leo Rautins.

"If we're going to be successful guys are going to commit," Triano said. "The fact that they're here working as hard as they are right now speaks volumes to their commitment. We're going to have to decide as a staff which players we want to move forward and be part of our commitment to the program."

In order to build for Rio, Nash and Triano hope to involve young players early and get them used to spending their summers working with the national team. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"I'm definitely committed. I have a lot to learn from these guys ... Being able to learn from them from now until it's time to play in the Olympics, I think I'll be ready by then."

Bringing the best

It appears Canada may have turned a corner as far as getting its best players out.

- NBA regulars Joel Anthony and Tristan Thompson were among those taking part, along with up-and-comers Kris Joseph, Cory Joseph and Andrew Nicholson.
- Recent Los Angeles Lakers draft pick Robert Sacre was at the camp in Toronto along with former Gonzaga teammates Kevin Pangos and Kelly Olynyk.

Joseph gives Esks a jolt vs. Argonauts

Kerry Joseph and Hugh Charles ran for touchdowns to lead the Edmonton Eskimos to a 26-17 win over the Argonauts on Monday night in Toronto.

Joseph replaced injured starter Steven Jyles in the first half and had a one-yard touchdown run to end the first quarter for Edmonton before Charles essentially cemented the Eskimos' fifth straight win over the Argos with a 10-yard scamper 2:31 into the fourth.

Eagles say Vick is nearly ready to go

Michael Vick will take his next snap in the season opener for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Vick is back at practice after leaving last Monday's game with injured ribs. He didn't play in Friday's game at Cleveland, but returned to the field Sunday night for Philadelphia's annual practice party.

"I think he's real close to 100 per cent," offensive co-ordinator Marty Mornhinweg said Monday. "I thought he threw the ball last night just beautifully; threw it strong and aggressively. So, I think he's ready to rock and roll."

The party appears over for talented young Dallas receiver Dez Bryant after a tumultuous summer. According to numerous reports, the Cowboys have set guidelines for Bryant to attend weekly counselling sessions, have a full-time security team and not be allowed to consume alcohol or attend strip clubs. Wozniak breezes into Round 2 of U.S. Open

A two-hour rain delay at the U.S. Open didn't throw Canada's Aleksandra Wozniak off her game.

Wozniak reached the second round of the Grand Slam with a 6-0, 6-3 win over Romania's Alexandra Cadantu on Monday.

The 48th-ranked Wozniak, a quarter-finalist last week in a Dallas tune-up event, needed little more than an hour to advance after losing four of her last five opening matches at Flushing Meadows.

The native of Blainville, Que., made it to the third round in 2009.

"Overall, it was the first solid match for me here," Wozniak said.

"She started putting more balls in during the second set. I'm glad I stayed on top of her and won this one. It was nice that it went so fast after the long rain delay."

Wozniak will next play good friend Lucie Safarova, who beat American Melanie Oudin 6-4, 6-0.

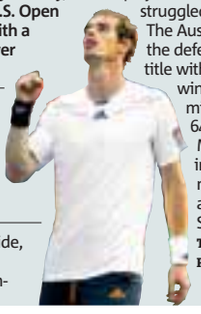
Seeking that elusive first Grand Slam title, Andy Murray, pictured, began his U.S. Open campaign Monday with a straight-set victory over Alex Bogomolov Jr.

- The Olympic gold medallist overcame early breaks in the first two sets of a 6-2, 6-4, 6-1 win.
- On the women's side, Samantha Stosur looked like a champion again, not the player who has often struggled this year.



The Australian began the defence of her Open title with a dominant win, needing 51 minutes to beat 64th-ranked Petra Martic 6-1, 6-1 in the tournament's first match at Arthur Ashe Stadium.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Good intentions are not enough — you must live up to your ideals. Make it your aim today to treat everyone you meet, even strangers, in the same way as you treat those you love beyond question.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
There may be times when it seems as if you are losing control of everything in your life but it's not true, so steer clear of self-pity. Actually, things are progressing quite well for you at the moment.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You may be tempted to try something outrageous today, something you believe will convince the doubters that you have what it takes. But what if it goes wrong? By all means, be bold but don't abandon common sense.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
With the travel area of your chart heavily emphasized, being on the move will be a lot of fun. But be aware that it will also have its dangers. Delays are going to happen whether you like it or not, so don't get angry.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Just because someone occupies a position of authority does not mean you can trust what they say. With communications planet Mercury under negative influences, a lot of what you hear is probably nonsense.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Knowledge is power and the more you know about what others are up to, the better placed you will be to get something out of it. Are we talking blackmail here? Of course not, perish the thought!

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Take what even your friends tell you with a grain of salt. They may not lie to you on purpose but they are a bit confused about what's going on. You don't need advice. Your conscience will guide you.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Focus only on things you understand. If you drift into areas where your knowledge is limited, you may fall foul of people who like to prey on trusting types like you. Be cautious. You don't have to prove yourself.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Do not — repeat, not — sweep important topics under the rug. If you ignore them now, they will come back bigger and tougher to deal with later on. Don't worry about being unpopular. You've got issues to resolve.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may be a bit blunt in some of the things you say over the next 24 hours but that's OK. For too long certain people have been avoiding the realities of the current situation. It's time to get real.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Your mind will race off in all sorts of weird and wonderful directions today and it could be a lot of fun — but it could also be dangerous. Try not to make important decisions until after Friday's full moon.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Focus on your own needs and desires and pretend that other people don't exist. That might sound a bit selfish but you've done more than your share for the greater good of late. Look after Number One today.
